

I decided to check the mail while I was home for lunch today and was well rewarded for my efforts. Inside my box was a key to open one of the big boxes and inside the big box was a parcel from Blair .

This awesome pile of goodness is in trade from some crochet covered stones I sent to her a little while ago. Bits of each of these fabrics are going into my charm quilt . One of the bars of chocolate (squeeee! - all three flavours!) came back to work with me for the afternoon and was shared around with my office mates (with the last piece saved to go to Rob at the end of the day). Everyone agreed it was fantastic and different and I know at least one of them is going to be hunting for these on their next trip to southern Canada (do they sell these in Canada? We don't get them here - but then we don't get a lot of stuff).
