

So now I'm making tea and printing off a bunch of letters.

The cards I'd ordered for New Year's this year (I never even try to get out cards in time for Christmas) finally arrived at the end of last week. I don't know what took them so long but I'm glad they're here. Rob and I polished off our what-we-did-in-2010 letter and I went to the post office for stamps. I was going to get the plain old regular ones but the Year of the Rabbit stamps had just arrived and I thought they were way more fun.

P.S. This is my 365 photo for the day. Somehow I missed yesterday completely. I thought I should probably snap something while I was thinking of it this evening.