A pretty package from Purl.

And inside are my fabrics for February's dress (which reminds me I still need to finish January's dress).

February's dress is going to be dress number 8 from Slip & Dress (the same Japanese sewing book as my last three dresses - I'm getting a lot of use out of it). It's a little skimpier than the last few and will be great for really hot days or days when I want to show off a cute shrug without overheating or having to worry about anything bunching up.

Search engines like Google, Bing, and Yahoo! use spiders to crawl the web and index pages. This process helps them understand the content of the pages and rank them based on relevance. The search engines then provide the results to the user when they enter a query. The search engines also use the information to improve their algorithms and provide better search results.
