

I got new shoes yesterday. I took a picture of them but it was blurry so I'll have to try again later. They made holes in the back of my feet on the walk home so today I'm sporting band-aids - very stylish.

My African Violets are starting to bloom.

One of my goals this weekend is to move around some furniture and set up my new light garden. I need to start my seedlings next weekend - can't wait for home grown veggies!

My other goal is to paint my toe nails. I have some awesome sparkly pink polish all ready for this job.

I set up a spinning corner in our living room. It's so nice to sit in the sun (or just out of the sun) and play with wool. I'm working on some yarn that was my sister's birthday present a few years ago. So far she's got one skein.

We had toast made with cheese bread for breakfast today. It's amazingly good but we always run out of bread too quickly.

I also had a little bit of this yogurt - Mmmmmm.

I have to go to the bottle depot this afternoon and I'm dreading it. It's always so loud and busy but if I don't get rid of things soon they will start jumping out at me when I open the pantry. The milk jugs are especially bad (even when you squish them).

I think I might reward myself with a little sewing time. I have some ideas for a nice chunk of Kokka cotton I got a while ago.