

3 Dresses Waiting

Friday, 20 May 2011 04:03

Have you been wondering what happened to my 10 dresses project? It took a little unofficial hiatus while I waited for some supplies to arrive. Now, finally, I've got everything I need to make my dresses for March (super late), April (not quite as late) and May (theoretically still on time). I'd really, really like to get all three dresses finished for the end of this month. With the long weekend coming up I think I have a reasonable chance at it but it will be a lot of work squished into a much smaller space of time than I'd envisioned when I started my project. Sometimes that's how things go. If I get these three done I'll have only one dress left to go. I've been thinking of ideas for June's dress but haven't really decided on anything yet. I'd like it to be something very easy going and casual. It would be nice to use a jersey fabric or something equally soft. The All-Weekend Sundress from Weekend Sewing keeps popping into my head but I'm not sure if it would really suit me.