

A few random pictures from around our yard last weekend:

Last year's fruit and this year's buds on the crabapple tree.

What I think might be a tree growing out of the gravel on the side of the house. I should probably do something about it before it gets bigger.

I don't know what this stuff is but it shows up all over the place in the spring. It has an interesting primeval look to it.

while trying to photograph my loyal companion watching me