

Cream Tea

Wednesday, 06 July 2011 04:13

Rob had to work through lunch yesterday so I came home by myself to let Abby out. Since I was on my own I decided to use up some leftovers from tea on Sunday and had a little cream tea all by myself.

I saw the clotted cream in the grocery store last week when I was getting stuff for the tea party and looked it up online to find out how to use it. In the process I came across a few descriptions of a cream tea. I just loved the idea and I had all the stuff.

The biscuit was really lovely with plenty of cream and strawberry freezer jam on top. It felt quite decadent for lunch and went surprisingly well with the rain that was pouring down outside. I think the hot tea helped a bit there.