

Maisie is a month old today! She is already so much bigger and more interactive than she was when we brought her home. She spends a lot of her time practising making different faces. This is one of my favourites. She does it when she's wiggling around while sleeping. I hope sometime I'll be able to catch it in beautiful focus with my big camera but for now this slightly blurry cell-phone pic makes me smile.